Father DARKLEAF'S Column

Wherein the Editor Gets in a Personal Touch

Well, from all directions we have been told that our subscribers like the larger paper better, and we are (Mother Brightleaf and I) glad.

A Bluefield, W. Va. reader says they thought our last week's issue was the New York Times coming in.

Different readers liked different parts of the new paper best. But the serial story seemed to win most favor. One reader says he likes to see six columns best of all. And we had a new correspondent to write in to have his section represented better. It will furnish stamps. You bet we will.

Now, let's see—oh yes, local sleuths, who can solve the riddle of who put the 'possum in Harold Spencer's bed t'other night at the hotel?

Looking over the text book list for the schools, I am amazed at the number of texts that I used away back yonder when I was in high schooler, that are still in use.

And I thought fact was in tomorrow morning's headlines.

But, maybe it's the same old multiplication table— and while I am on the subject, I fell to trying to prove the Pythagorean hypothesis again after so many years, and the inimitable was on "thirdly" by the time I got it done— did you ever have your mind go haywire like that in church?

And here I am, down here to the orchids and Bouquet box already.

HAD NARROW ESCAPE HERE

Jimmy Carter, N. and W. Railroad agent at Evergreen, was stunned for about fifteen minutes here yesterday afternoon by a heavy stroke of lightening in a sudden electrical storm. He was in his room at the time holding a comb in front of a dresser when the flash seemed to strike a radio on the other side of the room. He was knocked down and did not recover consciousness until some fifteen minutes later. It is obvious that only a strong heart could have withstood such a shock.

Teachers Had Meeting Today To Plan Work

It's back to school hours tomorrow for the children and teachers of Appomattox county, with the exception of the Pamplin high school which will not open until Sept. 27.

A meeting of teachers was held here this morning at the call of Supt. J. A. Burke. In addition to instructions from Mr. Burke, the teachers heard L. Crawley and Miss Merle Davis report on the curriculum for the year and saw prizes go to honor teachers of last year.

Miss Kate O'Brien had the highest average attendance in the high schools last year and Walter Page the highest in the grades. The Buck Hollow school had the best 5-point percentage.

State appropriations to school divisions are influenced by the average attendance record, and therefore parents are urged to start the children the very first day and keep them attending. They are also asked to procure books promptly, but to have the children attend anyway. Considerable curriculum research has been done during the summer months and great advancement in courses of study is predicted for the year.

Opportunity School

Very probably about six "Opportunity Schools" will begin in this county, possibly in October. They will be made possible by the FERA.

In discussing these schools, Mrs. Elwood Alvis points out that they are for those from 16 to 100 and will probably nursery classes for children from 2 to 5.

It is hoped that these schools may reach every section of the county. Those resiring to attend classes in any subject might see Mrs. Alvis or superintendent J. A. Burke.

The major motive behind these schools will be to raise the standard of literacy throughout the nation.
